Our Federation provides students from across the country with an effective and united voice, provincially and nationally, while creating space and opportunity to join together in creating change and winning victories on and off campus.

Because universities and colleges are funded primarily by the federal government and administered by the provincial government, government policies and priorities of both levels determine the accessibility of post-secondary education in Canada. Tuition fee levels, student financial assistance programs, Indigenous student funding and funding for research are all set directly or indirectly by both levels of government. It is vital that students collectively organize at the provincial and national levels to ensure their rights and concerns are fully represented.

IG: uw.writingcentre

FB: @uofwtutoringcentre

The goals of writing tutoring are to facilitate the processes that lead to better writers, helping all students become better at identifying problem spots in their own writing and becoming better readers of their prose. Peer tutors aim to create a customized session for writers, focusing on writing concerns such as organization, argument development, supporting claims, specifics of working within an academic genre, audience awareness, and developing critical thinking.

For more developed drafts, tutors can also guide writers to become better editors of their own work. No matter what kind of session you book, our focus is to help you become a better writer. Because of that, we do not proofread or edit students' papers. Instead, we will work with you to help you learn about writing, discover areas in which your writing can improve, and learn about how to resolve issues in your writing.

Established in 2011, the UWSA Bike Lab is the central hub for cyclers in Winnipeg's downtown core. It's an easily accessible on-campus maintenance pit-stop for students and community members. The lab hosts workshops for all skill levels and it is also open during the week for cyclists to drop-by and work on their bikes.

The UWSA Bike Lab is committed to community engagement and being a welcoming and safe neighbourhood meeting/learning space. Special programs, including cycling repair, build-a-bike and cycling safety workshops will be running over the fall and winter terms as well as regular student and community access hours during our drop-in sessions throughout the year.
